

SUPER EASY EVIL EYE GLOVE

Krista Suh, creator of the Pussyhat that created a Sea of Pink at the Women's March was inspired by the student activists of the Parkland, FL shooting to launch the evil eye glove—which will create a Sea of Eyes at the March for Our Lives to show Congress that the people are watching, history has their eyes on them.

WHAT	Evil Eye Glove making get-together
WHEN	About 2 hours (You can drop in as needed.)
WHERE	Place of your choosing
WHY	A chance for us to get together, to commiserate, and to brainstorm ways we can help while showing our support by making very easy evil eye gloves

#MARCHFOROURLIVES

INSTRUCTIONS

Ask everyone to bring a pair (or several pairs) of white socks

Provide: Black Sharpies and scissors, and a few packs of white socks for people who forget or are in the mood to do more, Ziploc bags, paper and pen

1. Cut the toe area of the sock off, depending on how long you'd like the part that will cover your hand to be
2. Cut a hole for the thumb on one side of the sock
3. Draw an evil eye on the palm area of the fingerless glove
4. Write a note (can be brief, can be long) to the marcher or student activist who will receive the gloves, talking about who you are, why you are making these gloves in support, and any well-wishes.
5. Put in Ziploc bag
6. Share on social media with hashtags #marchforourlives and #evileyeglove

At the end of the get together, gather the gloves (each pair in a ziploc bag), put in a box and mail to:

During the get-together, you can talk about the March for Our Lives, feelings about gun violence, ideas for gun control, and/or get to know each other with a Holy Trinity exercise originated by Regena Thomashauer and included in Krista Suh's book DIY Rules for a WTF World—

I brag... I am grateful for... I desire...
And everyone in the room then says, "And so it shall be, or something better"
